The Heavy Duty Remanufacturing Group (HDRG) of the Automotive Parts Remanufacturers Association (APRA) has awarded Detroit Reman its prestigious "Mike Hill Heavy Duty Remanufacturer of the Year Award."

The award, which is presented during the HDRG Remanufacturing Summit, is given to a company or individual who has demonstrated innovative ways to create and grow a successful business model and, in the process, supports industry efforts to advance the science of remanufacturing.

According to Joe Kipli, the panel's decision to honor Detroit Reman with this year's award is because of Detroit Reman's continued growth and innovation in remanufacturing technology.

Betsy Ballard, director of product development and growth, Detroit Reman, accepted the award on behalf of the company. "I am extremely proud to accept this prestigious award on behalf of all Detroit Reman employees. As a direct result of their commitment to produce high quality products and develop proprietary remanufacturing technologies, our customers have come to expect some of the highest value products available in the market. We aim to exceed their expectations every day."

"We are honored to receive this distinctive award which recognizes Detroit Reman's mission to leverage technology, creativity and a can-do culture to create products that are good for our customers and great for the environment," added Sanjiv Khurana, president, Detroit Reman.

With nearly 50 years of experience, Detroit Reman is an industry leader in remanufacturing, providing quality products for the on- and off-highway trucking, automotive, agriculture, transit and rail aftermarkets. Detroit Reman specializes in OE and contract remanufacturing services for a growing list of customers. Detroit Reman's six remanufacturing facilities are strategically located in North America and offer over one million square feet of production space. Detroit Reman's offerings include engines, engine components, transmissions, axles, fuel systems, electronics, and diesel after-treatment devices.
